Aging is a normal process that our dogs experience. There really isn't a choice about whether our dogs will age; time is unforgiving in that respect. But whether your dog is a puppy, young adult, adult, or senior you can take steps to maximize healthy aging. Scientific research has shown that fish, and in particular fatty fish such as sardines and anchovies, contain key nutrients that contribute to healthy aging. The beneficial fatty acids are commonly referred to as "omega-3 fatty acids." They include eicosapentaenoic acid (EPA) and docosahexaenoic acid (DHA) in fish and have direct benefits on multiple organ systems. In the brain they help prevent some diseases associated with aging, such as dementia. In the heart and blood vessels they help to prevent inflammatory changes that can lead to heart attacks and strokes. In joints they help to prevent inflammation associated with wear and tear that happen with activity and time. And they help keep the skin and haircoat healthy and moisturized while protecting it from the harmful effects of allergens. For dogs with itchy skin omega-3 fatty acids are particularly helpful. In fact, any kind of chronic inflammatory disease can benefit from daily omega-3 supplementation.

JFFD Omega-3 is sourced from whole, wild caught sardines, anchovies, herring and mackerel fished from the cold, clean waters off Iceland. It is cold-pressed (no degrading high temperatures) in a similar manner to the world's finest olive oils. It is held to the highest quality standards with thorough analytical testing performed to ensure its purity and to ensure its safety from environmental toxins often associated with seafood. Unlike many other fish oil products for pets, Omega Plus is human grade, exceeding the highest standards possible for supplements intended for human consumption.
